PRIEST, CRIES DENTIST

Confesses Counterfeiting With Schmidt—Did Doctor Help Priest Dismember Body of Anna Aumuller?

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Stripping from New York's river murder its mystique, the police today barred a nest of crime, fathered, they claim, by the Rev. Dr. Ernest Arthur Muret, dentist by day, by night alleged counterfeiter.

Muret is held on a technical charge of having in his possession a pistol, in violation of the law. He was arrested this morning after the police had been searching Schmidt's apartments and had uncovered evidence to show that Schmidt was a counterfeiter. This evidence led them to a flat rented by a man using the name of George Miller, in which were found all essentials for a counterfeiting outfit. The jointness of the building, confounding Muret, the priest, and Miller and Muret, unaware of his involvement in the counterfeiting, was the woman from whom he had rented the flat under the pseudonym.

REVEALED BY JUSTICES, Schmidt and Muret, the priest, and Miller were found together in the flat. They had been meeting secret agents of the police and wanted the flat as a place for experiments. The priest was fitted up as a dark room; a camera, a printing press, photographic supplies and other equipment handy to counterfeiter were found there.

But the police also found a bundle of chard counterfeit bills under the kitchen sink and five of the bills were scattered through the four rooms. After detectives had taken them to the custody as a material witness, Bertha Beck, the maid employed at his dental office, who knew nothing of the crime of which her employer was suspected.

With Muret locked up, detectives searched his office. There they found, in addition to the equipment, a revolver and all kinds of obnoxious instruments. The finding of these instruments, coupled with the fact that Muret and Schmidt had been crooked for some time, led the police to believe something which might directly connect Muret with the murder of Anna Aumuller.

THEY LOOK ALIKE. A strong physical resemblance between Muret and Schmidt led the detective to question the priest. He claimed that the resemblance was possible relationship to the priest. The detective, however, said: "The forehead, eyes, nose and ears are the same. If these two men are brothers, they are closely related."

Detectives believed the copper plate used to make the counterfeit bills was made by an expert engraver. They sought to find out who the engraver was, but to no avail. Schmidt's connections to insanity, in Doctor Feinberg's opinion, has been a new factor in the investigation of counterfeiting operations.

William W. Quinn, chief of the police, today began an investigation of Schmidt's and Muret's alleged counterfeiting.

When arrested on the technical charge of having a pistol in his possession, Muret was held in $5,000 bail. While Schmidt slept in his cell in the Tombs, Muret was in the basement of the arrest of Muret, the detective questioned Bertha Beck, the maid employed at his dental office, the morning concerning his relations with the confessed counterfeiters, Anna Aumuller, Schmidt, Inspector Faust believed, had not been questioned about Muret and had not given him the lead as to the latter's arrest.

WILL QUESTION WOMAN. After finishing with Muret, the detective planned to question Bertha Beck, who was being held in the inspector's office. And later today it was announced, the police would meet Muret with an eleven-year-old boy, who has said the detective that he saw a tall man accompany Schmidt to and from the basement avenue flat on different occasions.

Muret is six feet tall, overtopping Schmidt by several inches. At the 11th street flat, which the detective says consists of four rooms and a bath, they found a perfectly dark room in the kitchen, while the dining room was a large chamber. Inspector Faust said this "morning" was one of the finest he had ever seen. In the bed room was a "small" press, two pairs of rubber gloves, a box of chemicals and acids of the kind used in developing plates, and a box of chemicals. He also found a box of chemicals. He also found a box of chemicals. He also found a box of chemicals.

Chicago Dentists Don't Know Dr. E. Muret (Associated Press.) Chicago, Sept. 15.—It is known among dentists in Chicago that a dental practitioner, associated with the Rev. Dr. Ernest Arthur Muret, is a member of a national dental association. This fact has been used by the police to connect Muret with the murder of Anna Aumuller.

BOLLING H. JONES AT HIS NEW DESK

First Democrat to occupy the position as Atlanta's postmaster for seventeen years. The last Democrat served under the Cleveland administration in 1892 and went out in 1896.

Atlanta's new postmaster as he assumed the duties of office Tuesday.

Bolling H. Jones began his new duties as postmaster Tuesday morning. The day was devoted mostly to getting acquainted with his future work and with the details of the office. Former Postmaster McKee was at the postoffice for a while during the morning, assisting the new postmaster in getting familiar with the routine and the purpose of the various departments.

Many people called on Postmaster Jones to express their wish to cooperate with him in any way possible.

"The first thing I am going to do," said Postmaster Jones, "is to learn the business here. The work is new to me and I propose to familiarize myself thoroughly with it before I can make any recommendations."

I have, of course, the privilege of suggesting any changes desired by me. I shall be looking for suggestions from the men who come into a new office, like this one, and I shall be glad to make any recommendations.

ATLANTA BOOKLET ISSUED BY CONVENTION BUREAU

Cover Shows Atlanta in '64 and Atlanta Today in Striking Contrast

A booklet expounding the merits of Atlanta through photographs and tables of facts and figures has just been issued by the Atlanta convention bureau. The booklet contains forty-eight pages and is printed on the best grade of paper.

On the cover are two panoramic views of Atlanta. They are in striking contrast and illustrate effectively the rise of this city in the last fifty years. One is a picture of the battle of Atlanta on July 22, 1864; the other a photograph of the city line of the city today. The first shows thousands of men in a death struggle in a three-day battle, with the other a substantial city with skyscraper buildings.

There are more than a score of illustrations. Every point of interest in the city is pictured. Atlanta's history is written in the book by men who have followed the city's progress and development and have the facts at their finger tips.

Every page of the book is headed "Atlanta Always Ahead." There are tables showing the climatic conditions and General Sherman is quoted: "I held 100,000 men around Atlanta for six months in the year 1864."

THAW WINS POINTS AS CROWDS CHEER FOR HIM

Hearing on Habeas Corpus Writ Indefinitely Postponed. May Be Heard Sept. 23

(By Associated Press.)

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 16.—Harry S. Thaw, inmate from Mattawan, won a victory in the United States district court here today when Judge Aldrich indefinitely postponed a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus obtained by Thaw's lawyers. This means that Thaw will have a federal writ to check his immediate return to New York state in the event Governor Feller orders his extradition after the hearing to be held at Concord.

In an open discussion with William T. Feller, special deputy for New York state, after announcing the suspension of the hearing, Judge Aldrich said that search of the statutes had failed to reveal to him any law under which a man in Thaw's position, a inmate charged with a crime, could be extradited.

Mr. Jerome tried to block postponement of the hearing on the ground that the writ had been obtained as a matter of expediency. He produced an affidavit of a newspaper man quoting Thaw and full of 1864, and there is no other place on the continent where I could have kept so large a body of men in good health."

THAW'S COUNSEL AS SAYING THIS, BUT HE DID NOT PRESS THE MATTER AFTER THAW'S COUNSEL HAD SECURED THE COURT THAT THE APPLICATION FOR THE WRIT HAD BEEN ENTIRELY REGULAR.

I was talking, one day, with the driver of a giant locomotive that helps draw the "Waterbury" from New York to Chicago.

His story was based on an experience he had while running the engine to the railroad yards. One day, as he was about to start the engine, he noticed a man standing on the tracks. He called out to him, but the man did not answer. He then saw the man fall. He tried to stop the engine, but it was too late. The man was killed.

He said he was happy to see the man's body recovered and buried. He said he was glad to see the man's family and that he was glad to see the man's body recovered and buried.

When Railroads and Police Departments, Armies and Navies of many Nations demand that an individual shall have good, sound teeth, it is a sign that you should take care of your teeth.

SULZER AND HIS COUNSEL GET READY FOR TRIAL

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Governor Sulzer and his counsel are busy preparing for the opening of the impeachment trial on Thursday. Light's trial is expected to begin in the capitol and conference between counsel and the governor are held daily.

The governor and his counsel have given no intimation concerning their plans for the defense, but it is understood they virtually were completed at a conference yesterday between D. Cady Herrick and former State Senator Harvey D. Hinson.

Hugh J. Reilly, a contractor and railroad builder for the Cuban government, one of today's witnesses before the impeachment managers, said he loaned Mr. Sulzer $10,000 in cash shortly after his nomination. Governor Sulzer, he said, still owed him this money in addition to other loans, which brought his total indebtedness to Reilly up to $25,000.

Mr. Reilly was examined in private before the impeachment managers' attorney and this is what he told the newsmen. He testified, Reilly was questioned regarding his dealings with Mr. Sulzer, when he was chairman of the foreign relations committee in the house of representatives, in connection with claims Reilly was pressing against the Cuban government.

Frestle Collapses and He Plunges to Death, Together With Fireman

ALLAHABAD, Sept. 16.—The body of John Woody was laid to rest here today in Mass. graves. Mr. Woody was killed on the Southern Railway train wreck at Birmingham, Friday, when a freight train collapsed under the weight of a train.

Woody was foreman of the gang which was repairing the structure, when a train approached. He signaled the train to stop, and when about the middle of the freight collapsed, the train fell into the ravine, killing the foreman and one man and wounding the other.

The train was carrying a large quantity of coal, and the wreckage was a terrible sight. The train was killed, and four others seriously injured.

During Year of 1913

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Uncle Sam's "keep off the grass" warning was violated only 144 times in the past fiscal year, even though the warning covered a territory of more than 128,000,000 acres of national forest. In announcing the record, the forest service officials expressed their satisfaction at the showing, awarding much credit to the stock raisers in the neighborhood of the forests for their co-operation in enforcing the law.

"Of the total number of cases of grazing trespasses, twenty were dismissed for lack of evidence. A majority of the others already have been prosecuted and fines and punishment inflicted. During the year more than twenty million head of stock grazed under permits on the national preserve and thirty-two thousand permits were issued."

HUMBLE BANANA TOTEM
FOR SOUTH AMERICA

Director Barrett Praises Fruit. It Will Now Succeed the Dove of Peace

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Shooting the dove of peace from off its perch, John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American union, today installed the humble banana as the emblem of international fraternity at least so far as Latin America is concerned. In a letter addressed to the senate and house congresses on the tariff bill, protesting against the proposed duty on the fruit, he portrayed the humble banana as a powerful civilizing influence.

"Only a person like myself," Mr. Barrett sets forth, "who has been intimately associated with the recent history and development of Latin-American countries, and especially those bordering on the Caribbean-sea and Gulf of Mexico, appreciates the mighty change that has been brought in the political, economic, agricultural and social conditions of those countries by the growth of the banana industry."

The building up of the banana business has done more than any other industry associated with the recent history of Latin America to bring about conditions of prosperity and peace in the region.

ULSTER RAISES ARMY
TO HELP HOME RULE

(By Associated Press.)

BELFAST, Ireland, Sept. 16.—Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Irish Unionists, landed in Ireland today. The object of his visit, it was said, was to inspect a volunteer army which is being raised in Ulster to support the provisional government which is to be brought into existence if the home rule bill becomes law.

The Ulster army is said to be thoroughly organized and to have attained a strength of about 100,000 men. This number, his leaders expect to double when recruiting has been completed.

During the week several private meetings of the Ulster Unionist council will be held to make arrangements for the provisional government. There seems little hope of a general conference between the various parties on the question.

AMERICAN SHIPPING
BOOMED LAST MONTH

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—American ship yards were busy in August, for figures issued today by the United States bureau of navigation disclose that 113 vessels of various descriptions were turned out in the twenty-six working days of that month, or at the rate of 4.3 vessels a day. The greater number were built in yards on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, although the Great Lakes yards contributed a small fleet.

The tonnage of new craft was upward of twenty-one thousand, the largest single contribution to this total being the steel steamer Narragansett, built at Wilmington, Del., and having a capacity of 2,423 tons.

BAND OF GRAY TO MARCH WITH VETS OF BLUE

Detachment of Forest's Cavalry Will Be Feature of Big G. A. R. Parade

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 15.—(Under the second of the 47th annual convocations of the Grand Army of the Republic, and allied organizations, the welcome extended to visiting veterans by the citizens at a reception last night will be supplemented tonight when addresses of welcome will be delivered by Governor Ben W. Hooper, of Tennessee, William D. Ashley, commander of the department of Tennessee, Mayor C. C. Thompson, of Chattanooga, and others. A feature of the convocation today was the reunion of veterans who participated in the battle of Chickamauga. Early today these veterans were taken to the famous battlefield. They spent the morning in tours over the field under the direction of the city of Chattanooga, and the afternoon with the Chattanooga park commission, as a commemorative program which included addresses by prominent veterans was scheduled for the afternoon.

Opening sessions were held today by the following organizations allied with the Grand Army of the Republic: National Association of Civil War Veterans; Women's Relief Corps; Ladies of the Grand Army; Sons of Veterans Auxiliary; National Association of Naval Veterans; National Union of Ex-servants of the War; National Association of Civil War Veterans; National Union of Ex-servants of the War; National Association of Civil War Veterans; National Union of Ex-servants of the War.

Interest is being manifested in the plans for the veterans' parade tomorrow. Announcement was made today that a detachment of Forest's Cavalry would march at the head of the Ohio division. It was said the Confederate cavalryman had accepted an invitation extended by Colonel Henry N. Hanson, of Toledo, to take this position in the parade.

Shortly before noon it appeared as if the threatening rain had passed over. Activities in the streets of the city became livelier. Life and drum corps, bands and detachments of the various veterans circulated along the streets throughout the day. The parade from Fort McPherson, Ga., paraded in a street parade through the city. Commanding Officer Alfred C. Heer and staff reviewed the parade.

Private Orlando A. Rogers, of Kokomo, Ind., today was elected president of the Society of the Cumberland in forty-first annual session here. Other officers were: Captain H. H. Chamberlain, vice president; Captain C. D. D. Chamberlain, secretary; and Captain W. J. W. Chamberlain, treasurer. All of the officers except the president are local men.

Just before the annual election of officers a resolution was adopted favoring the erection in this city of a monument. A similar resolution was passed three months ago by the United Confederate Veterans at their annual meeting here.

DAIRYMEN IMPROVING, DECLARES COMMISSIONER
J. D. Price Says Way to Get Better Milk Is to Co-operate With Dairies

Atlanta's milk supply is not 90 per cent unfit for human use, states Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price, who is not prosecuting nineteen cases against dairymen for selling impure milk. He is not prosecuting because, he said, he is going on the assumption that the dairymen are willing to observe the law and that if he gives them a chance they will do so. "We are running this milk affair somewhat in the nature of a school," he said. "We are telling the dairymen what the law requires of them. I'm perfectly safe in saying that in at least three out of every four of these cases we've had the dairymen make an average improvement of 75 per cent in the milk shown analyzed."

The only violators who need to fear the law in this regard under his administration said Mr. Price are those who are deliberate violators of it—those who've been told once what it calls for and have been told how they can obey it. A man who sells milk in the milk that he sells says Commissioner Price, is hunting trouble.

The commissioner told of several instances in which dairymen had learned their milk was not up to standard—that it had too many bacteria in it, was dirty, or had been watered; and then had applied to the department for instruction in detail as to how they could improve the conditions of their dairies. One of the biggest dairies in Georgia went to him that its milk had been refused by the Savannah authorities, and asked for an inspector to come down and straighten out its methods. "Another dairymen couldn't get his milk where he wanted to, so he asked about it. He was shown into the laboratory, and there examined specimens of the milk he sold, with the aid of the inspector. He was corrected, and went away profoundly impressed."

"We are determined that this law shall be observed," said Commissioner Price. "We are going to enforce it. But the manner of our enforcement is to grab a man by the neck and prosecute him for it unless he is a deliberate violator. We are not going to let any unscrupulous milk dealer get away with it. We are going to enforce this law by showing the dairymen in it and punishing them if they don't."

The commissioner said that his operations are state-wide and are not by any means restricted to Atlanta. "I have through the Georgia State Board of Agriculture, which has obtained some good results in this country. He undertook the energetic campaign on behalf of his department because the law directed certain requirements which were not being met by the dairymen, said he, and not at the instance of the Atlanta chamber of commerce."

ANOTHER INDICTMENT AGAINST WYLIE SMITH

Hapeville Man With Whom He Returned From Mexico, Makes Charges

Another grand jury indictment, charging forgery, was returned Tuesday by the Fulton county grand jury against J. Wylie Smith, who was a fugitive in Mexico several years, following the failure of the Commercial Loan and Trust company, of which he was secretary and treasurer.

The prosecutor on the bill of indictment, which was returned by the grand jury, was F. M. Hamilton, of Hapeville, with whom Smith returned from Mexico after Pinkerton and United States detectives had failed in every effort to extradite him.

Smith, whose physician, Dr. C. M. Curtis, of College Park, declares in a divorce proceeding, was living on a plot of land in the city of Atlanta, where he had discovered evidence, which showed that he, Smith, was innocent, and that he wanted him to come back and testify against others, who were to be involved.

Before he crossed the border, Smith declared to a Journal reporter Tuesday, that Hamilton crossed the border, and he exhibited a telegram to substantiate his claim. The conditions were that Hamilton would go his bond in order that he might not have to remain in jail and jeopardize his chances of regaining his liberty, which he would not be forced to trial until he had been given time to collect certain evidence, and thereby that debts in Mexico should be paid for Smith by Hamilton before the former crossed the border.

Both of the first named agreements Hamilton has violated, Smith asserted. Instead of trying to get him out on bond, Hamilton tried to keep him in jail, he says, and now he has become a fugitive again. Hamilton has turned from friend to prosecutor, the former fugitive asserts, because Smith has steadfastly refused to go into court and bring false charges against five individuals.

Smith declares that if his prosecutors will let him alone that he can make good every debt he owes within a short time, he is inclined to give him time.

Private Orlando A. Rogers, of Kokomo, Ind., today was elected president of the Society of the Cumberland in forty-first annual session here. Other officers were: Captain H. H. Chamberlain, vice president; Captain C. D. D. Chamberlain, secretary; and Captain W. J. W. Chamberlain, treasurer. All of the officers except the president are local men.

Blind Singer of Atlanta Streets in Insane Asylum

Annie Monroe, blind singer of the streets, familiar to that city, who was committed to the state asylum for the insane Tuesday by Ordinary John R. Wilkinson, after a hearing, she was suffering from the unique hallucination that some service men, equipped with knives and axes, were following her. She was taken to the asylum, where she was assigned to the large basement which she assigned the late Leonard B. Polson, former owner of the Polson hotel, had left her at his death.

Behind the woman's commitment is a story of the generosity of the late Mr. Polson, who was killed in a military campaign, and it was said of him that he was a very generous man. He found Annie Monroe on the streets, hungry and homeless, and he took her to his hotel and provided her with a room and laundry and food. After a time he became infatuated with her, and she became demoralized.

She told people that she could see secret service detectives following her to her room, and that she was being followed. "That is the only thing I can see," she said, "but I know they are there."

CREMATORY MACHINERY GIVING MORE TROUBLE

Councilman Ashley Still More Dissatisfied, and Will Demand Costly Changes

Councilman Claude L. Ashley, who announced after a visit to the crematory Monday morning that he would demand the installation of a different type of traveling crane before signing vouchers for the final payment on the plant, made another visit to the plant Tuesday morning and came away still more dissatisfied.

"The motors of the cranes burned out Saturday," said he, "and had to be replaced. It was late Monday before they got started again. Then, after they finally got started, one of the motors stopped again, and now they are operating with only one crane. Also, they've put smaller rail buckets on the cranes, so that the quantity of garbage they convey is very much reduced. I told Mr. Quillian, the contractor's company representative, that I was thoroughly disgusted. They've got to 'install a bridge crane before I'll ever sign a voucher to pay them the balance of the purchase price.'"

The price the city agreed to pay, after the crematory contract had gone to the supreme court, was $249,000. Of that amount $125,000 was to be paid at once, and was paid, and the balance of $124,000 was to be paid whenever the plant should demonstrate to the satisfaction of the mayor and council that it could fulfill its guarantee and operate satisfactorily.

Being chairman of the sanitary committee, Councilman Ashley is in a position to hold up the payment of the $125,000, because vouchers for the same must be approved by him, among others, before the contractor can draw a check.

And even if he were to sign the vouchers, the mayor still would have to be satisfied, as he is the man who signs the city's checks.

RAILROAD COMMISSION TO CONSIDER 18 CASES
Eighteen cases are on the docket for next week's regular session of the railroad commission. The session will begin Tuesday and will last till the docket is cleared. Among the matters to be decided are the classification of unincorporated, the complaint by the Macon chamber of commerce against the Southern Railway for alleged overcharging, a six month period being asked instead, the location of a new Southern railway depot at Corners, and the petition for a new Seaboard Air Line depot at Lawrenceville.

QUILLIAN AND ASHLEY ATTACK COUNTY BOARD

They Are Mad Over County's Failure to Build Sewers Which It Agreed to Build

Fletcher A. Quillian, chairman of the board of health, Monday morning attacked the Fulton county commissioners for their failure to build the sewer, Butler street and Magnolia street sewers, and Councilman Ashley, who was present while Mr. Quillian was talking, registered an "Amen" to what he said.

"I have been before the county board so often, and so little has been accomplished, that I am sick and disgusted," said Mr. Quillian.

Early last year the county agreed to build these sewers as soon as it could get to them. At the start of this year the county commissioners agreed that they would be able to do the work this year. The city was to furnish the material and the county was to furnish the labor. The city has done its part. The county has done practically nothing.

It seems that the board and Captain Donaldson, the county chief of construction, are at odds. The county board says they would need a rock crusher and an engine at the Magnolia street sewer. (I mean the city) went and bought the crusher and engine at once. The crusher happened to be located by Shelby Smith, chairman of the county board, instead of by Captain Donaldson, and the result is that it has stood there idle for several months, taking the rain and weathering.

Councilman Ashley said: "It is a fact that in the county board, and the public is paying the freight. However, I don't blame Captain Donaldson. I blame the board. They are the ones in authority. If they decide that certain work must be done, and they have the facilities to do it, and the time has come to do it, then they ought to have the work done. I've nearly worked my head off to get work started on the Butler street and Highland avenue sewers, and like Mr. Quillian, I'm mighty near decided it's no use. Why, the city has had material on the ground, waiting for the county to commence work, since the first of last May."

Mr. Quillian said the approach of cold weather, during which it is not humane to work convicts in a sewer ditch, probably will now delay the whole work until next spring.

AGE LIMIT CHANGED FOR NIGHT SCHOOL AT TECH

Boys 14 Years of Age Now May Study There—School Opens Wednesday

The age limit for eligibility to attend the free night school at the Georgia School of Technology, which will open Wednesday evening of this week, has been changed from sixteen to fourteen years. This means that anybody who is fourteen years of age or older can take advantage of the courses. The age limit works only one way, and there is no limit in the other direction. Some of the students in years past have been gray-haired men. The reason for changing the limit from sixteen to fourteen years is explained by Dr. K. G. Matheson, president of Georgia Tech, and Prof. J. N. G. Nesbit, who has direct charge of the night school.

Many boys conclude their grammar school work at about fourteen years of age and go to work. If these youngsters let pass two years without pursuing their studies further, they will be less likely to take them up again, whereas, by arranging it so that they can work and at the same time go directly from grammar school into the Tech night school, their habits of study are unbroken.

Enrollment and registration for this year's session began on Monday morning and is the largest up to date in the history of the institution. The night school is a regular department of the Georgia Tech, and students who enroll are given advantages for study—living under the Tech faculty and working in the Tech shops. The courses which may be taken at the Tech include architecture, mechanical drawing, electrical engineering, wood and machine shop work, mechanical engineering, mathematics, chemistry, English and others. It is believed that making the age limit lower will increase materially the attendance of the school.

AUTO ROBBERS STEAL JOHN S. OWENS' CAR

Owner Left Machine Standing in Front of House, and Now It's Gone

The gang of thieves who for the past two weeks have kept the automobile owners of Atlanta on a nervous tension, made another good haul Monday afternoon, when they slipped a car away from the residence of John S. Owens, of the Central Bank and Trust corporation.

The car, a Detroit electric of a late model, was left standing in front of the Owens residence, 37 West Eleventh street late in the afternoon. The thieves quietly made away with it, and the white members of the family were in the house, and to trace of the car has yet been found by the police. The number of the machine was 2477.

LOCAL SCOTS FEED ON "HAGGIS" NEXT FRIDAY

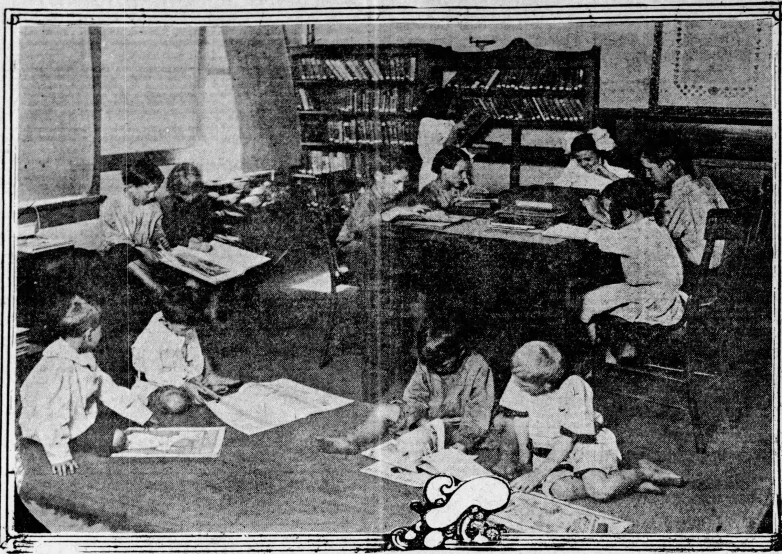

Cards announcing a special meeting of importance of the Atlanta Scottish association have been mailed the Scots of Atlanta who are requested to gather at the Burns club house at the end of the Soldiers' Home car line at "haggit" o'clock Friday evening.

While business of importance is to be discussed, the officials would show that all of the time will not be devoted to serious talk, for each member is requested to bring another Scot with him to help eat the "haggit."

CHILDREN OF THE MILL DISTRICTS ENJOY BOOKS AND MAGAZINES IN LIBRARIES

These are a few of hundreds of children who go regularly to the branch libraries established by the Carnegie library in factory neighborhoods. The photograph shows a group of bright, pretty children in the reading room at Wesley House, near the Fulton Bag and Cotton mills. Wesley House has had a library for some time, and numbers over 150 children among its patrons. The Carnegie library only recently added books to this reading room.

Starved Minds of the Little Factory Boys and Girls Devour Fairy Stories and Animal Tales With an Eagerness That the Little People of Happier Worlds Have Never Shown

Once upon a time, as the children say, libraries were for grown folk, and those who loved to browse among the books were called scholars or "bookworms." But in recent years libraries, especially the public libraries, have been devoted as much to the use of children as to grown-ups; and, in Atlanta especially, the children's room is the most delightful part of the library.

For years the Carnegie library has specialized on making books attractive to children, and since the children's room was opened the attendance has grown wonderfully. Pictures, stories, myths, every kind of feature that will attract the minds of the little folk, form a part of the library work in the children's room, and the results have been so amazingly successful that the librarian is extending the scope of the work.

A short while ago Miss Wooten decided to carry the children's work still further, and by opening branch libraries in the mill districts, give the poorer children an opportunity to learn the fairy tales and hear the stories that the children in the central part of the city enjoy.

Several small libraries have been opened, one at the Fulton Bag and Cotton mills and several others in settlement homes. That they were wanted is proven by the eagerness with which the children rush to get the books. Miss Bradley and Miss Whitaker, of the Carnegie staff, have had charge of the mill libraries, and are making friends with the children there. One day they took some books to a new library and were busy talking to the children. Miss Bradley felt some one tugging at her skirt, but at first did not notice it. Finally, however, she glanced down to see what the matter was, and a tiny, piping little voice said, "Woman, I want one of them books."

"What is that?" she asked, looking at the child who had just spoken. "The little fellow promptly got his book and hastened off with it clutched under his arm."

"It is pathetic to see the eagerness of these children," said the librarian. "Why, some of them take the picture books and set them in the window and cling to them, they're so glad to have them."

All the delightful animal stories, the fairy stories, the children's play stories, are among the books sent out, and they are always in demand. "But the children are not the only ones who benefit by the books. The mothers and the fathers have displayed a keen interest in the reading rooms, and are as frequent patrons of the libraries as are the children."

"We want now," said Miss Wooten, "to install libraries inside the mills, so that the given people who work there may have access to books in recreation hours."

The idea came through a workman at one of the mills. He went to Miss Wooten and asked her was there not some way in which books might be placed in the mills, and Miss Wooten has taken the matter up with owners.

The library will be glad to establish all libraries wherever the owners are willing, and by next year Miss Wooten hopes to see a number of reading rooms in the mills.

Here's a Volume You Won't Find Idle So Long as 'Ginger' Goes

Number four of volume one of "Piedmont Parables" is off the press and its subscribers (who pay nothing for it) have got it and gone to the secluded corners to read it. Publicity Bill Parkhurst, its editor, has put over some good ones in the latest issue of this unique magazine, issued "spontaneously" when he has nothing else to do.

Here is one: "There was a young lady named Aster; Her hobble fit tight like a plaster; She took a big swoon and felt quick a breeze— Then she knew she had met with disaster."

Some of the philosophy which Editor Bill offers to his readers is worth while. "Every woman is a natural born gambler and likes to take a chance. Look at some of the things they marry," says he. And again he opines "Any old mutt can stay out of debt, but it takes a smart man to stay in."

What Anne Rittenhouse Says

THE EVENING STORY

(Copyright, 1913, by W. W. Weller.)

"I suppose you all know that Bran McPherson is back in town," said Mrs. Tait.

The four women who were standing about the quilt frame tacking a checkered, comfortable suspended work to stare at her. "You don't say?" they exclaimed.

Instantly they glanced at Sabina. She had come to the tacking here now to look on than anything else. But they had set her to tacking needles. She sat in plain view of them all and Mrs. Tait spoke who was trying to cook a refractory thread and through the eye of a needle. Suddenly the thread and needle began to dance entirely at cross purposes. Her hands were trembling and eagerly she tried to force them to do her bidding. To excuse her perturbation and to hide her face she dropped the needle and stooped to look for it.

"There it is, Sabina," said Mrs. Tait, "standing straight up in the carpet. That's a sign you've got a bean. You'll have to get one pretty soon or else take old maddy's luck."

Sabina bit her lip. A little mouse felt with the woman resumed work and she got the needle strung successfully upon the thread.

Then Mrs. Kinner spoke: "So Bran's back?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Tait, "who had been waiting to deliver her information. He's moved back here. I don't know. He's got two children—girls. Bran's a widower, you know. Eliza Bates is sleeping his wife. I don't know but I shall go over tomorrow and lend a hand myself. He's poor and won't feel like hiring much, I imagine, and the girls are young. He's got right to work. Must have written ahead for his job."

"He couldn't have liked Kansas," mused Mrs. Kinner.

"No," I guess he didn't like Kansas, its had fifteen years of it, though hung on pretty well. I think," said Mrs. Tait.

Sabina got out of her chair. She made a pretense to hurry. "It's 5 o'clock, Mrs. Tait, and I must go," she said. "You see, I always feel my chickens at 5. She stopped coloring. Mrs. Tait nodded. "Why, of course, Sabina, go if you must. But we hate to lose your company."

Sabina escaped. Out in the fresh, dear May afternoon she drew her breath deeply. Her dying thoughts trembled down. Bran McPherson was back! She had not known or dreamed that such a thing could be. He was gone out of her life, she believed, forever, when he went to Kansas and refused him, she now saw, would go to McPherson had not been good enough for her, a Rose. She had told him so with superb young insolence and laughed at the tears that smothered his boyish face. "And you can go right back up there," he had said. "You came from, and stay there," she said. "Thank you, Sabina," he tried to retort. So to Kansas had gone, but he had not stayed. He was back, and the mention of his coming had upset Sabina's strategy. After all, he was an old lover.

"He's come back worse off than he went," thought Sabina. "He has two children and he's getting married. He's not marrying him. I had to go and act like an old fool. I set my face as red as her comfortable, and my excuse for it was that those poor women enjoyed it. I'm so ashamed I could thrash me all the way home."

Sabina, preoccupied and unsteady, whirled round a corner and collided often very handsome, though she would not own this fact even to herself. She did not answer. The child followed her into that silent interior, too big for its one occupant. She stood in the hall and stared at her wonderingly, and until Sabina returned with the basket she seemed not to have moved.

"It's nice, here," she said with a sigh. "It's the nicest house I was ever in. We lived in a soddy out in Kansas. Father always meant to make a real house, but there never was money enough. The Dale house is a real house, but it isn't as nice as this."

"You poor little thing," Sabina murmured. And she put her arms about the child and kissed her. Esther snuggled close, with her eyes shut, drawing long breaths.

Sabina dare trust herself no farther. Her heart she suspected was running away with her head. She caught up her to the place where Bran waited. And under Mrs. Lane's eyes she helped father up the potatoes and put them into the basket herself. "There," she said, "I guess they'll taste just as good as if you had carried them home."

"That's making you lots of trouble, Sabina," said Mrs. Lane. "But—"

He stammered and grew confused. Sabina knew as well as if he had finished the sentence that he could not afford to abandon the potatoes. "Either you run along with Dad, or get the basket," he added, more calmly.

"I'm glad to see you," Sabina, remembering the kindly consciousness of the gliding little child at her side, and excitedly childish. She didn't violently with a man who was walking rapidly, leading a nine-year-old girl by the hand and carrying a huge paper sack of potatoes. Her unexpected contact jarred the sack off his arm and it fell with a bang, splitting and scattering potatoes in every direction. The little girl gave a cry and shriek against her father, who started from this wreckage to Sabina and turned as white as death.

He was, it seemed, already as white as he would be for, for looked as if he had been ill. He was thin and a little stooped. His hair was graying at the temples, his eyes were hollow and tired and very sad. He wore a shiny black suit that was at least as old as the child beside him, who like him—like his youthful self, as Sabina remembered—was a little boy.

Sabina staggered back, trying to right her hat and her disturbed senses at the same time. "I'm so sorry," she gasped.

"Never mind," the man spoke gently. He added hesitantly: "I guess you don't know me, do you, Sabina?"

"Of course, I know you," Sabina said. She held out her strong, plump hand. "How do you do, Bran? I didn't know until ten minutes ago that you were back. I'm glad to see you."

He grasped her hand as if it were the most precious thing the world could offer him. "Thank you, Sabina. That helps," he said. "I feel that I've got right back among my friends. I want my little girl here to feel the same way. Of course, everything's strange to her yet, and she's naturally shy. But she'll get acquainted in time."

"Is she your oldest girl?" asked Sabina.

"Yes," he said, "she is. She's a little underbred and she's a little bit of a trouble-maker, but she's a good girl. She's named Margaret. When you see one you see both; they're just alike except for difference in their eyes. Margaret is thirteen, and she's got a good home. I thought she could get along with what I could do."

"Oh, yes, you can," Sabina said. She became painfully aware of the scattered potatoes and that old Mrs. Lane was eyeing her from behind a cloud shifted into her face. "If you'll just wait a breath I'll run out to my shed and get a basket for the potatoes."

"Your house is awful big. You live alone?" Bran's eye ever longed to see Sabina.

Sabina caught her breath. She was understand children and she had thought she did not like them, but there was a distinct appeal for her in this little creature. With a quick movement she gathered up the small hand.

"Sabina! I like better," said Bran. "Either you bring the basket—either and I need her. I want them to come often, Bran. You'll let them?"

"Thank you, Sabina, I will," said Bran.

Sabina slowly went home. She went through her big yard with its trees and shrubbery where little children never went, and she found such charming rumpling places for them, and into her big house, empty except for herself. She sank down on the stairs and buried her face in her hands.

After a long time she looked up and a face was the face of one who had seen pleasant visions. "I guess I can't as I please," she said aloud. "I've money enough and I'm old enough."

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

Winter Cover Crops

THE fertility of most of our lands has been so much exhausted from the constant planting of cotton and of the sun during summer months, being kept open to the hot rays unless the crops planted on these lands are rotated and something planted to add nitrogen and vegetable matter to the soil we will eventually kill the producing power of our soil to such an extent that it can not possibly be made profitable. In fact thousands of acres are now cultivated that do not pay actual expenses.

With the methods and opportunities we have to build up our lands rapidly and add a wonderful amount of fertilizer that nature has given us at practically no cost whatever we are offered a great opportunity to make our lands from two to four times as productive as they are at present. This can be done at a low cost and during the winter months when but few of our farms have anything at all on them.

By the planting of crimson clover, vetch and peas, also soy beans, we can build our lands to such a fertile stage that we can make every acre profitable and double the yield of every acre that can be planted next year by planting now. A mature of fifteen pounds of this clover in the fall will produce a crop of vetch in the spring and a crop of peas in the summer. It should be done during the months of September and October. This will not interfere with the present cotton crop that is now on the land and will enrich the soil.

A mature of fifteen pounds of this clover in the fall will produce a crop of vetch in the spring and a crop of peas in the summer. It should be done during the months of September and October. This will not interfere with the present cotton crop that is now on the land and will enrich the soil.

Yours very truly,
